The JavaScript Proxy Handlers are used to define custom behavior for fundamental operations performed on objects. By defining handlers, you can override the default behavior of fundamental operations. Following are the common proxy handler methods: apply(), construct(), get(), has(), etc.